Eurex Exchange launched its new trading architecture in production on 3 December 2012. During the product migration phase more products will be activated on the new trading architecture in a stepwise approach. On the migration date from the start of trading the products migrated can only be traded on the new trading architecture and will no longer be tradable on the current Eurex® production system.

The next step of the product migration will take place during the period 18 March to 22 March 2013. The products will be migrated to the new trading architecture on three days (18 March, 20 March, 22 March). The products to be migrated will be included in Annex F ("Products on the new trading architecture") of the Contract Specifications for Futures Contracts and Options Contracts at Eurex Deutschland and Eurex Zürich. In case certain products of the listed product classes are not part of the migration on the specific day, these products are listed distinctly in Annex F.

The revised migration strategy has already been published in Eurex circular 016/13. In addition, a .csv-file containing the current list of products to be migrated is available on the Eurex website www.eurexchange.com for download under the following path:

Technology > New trading architecture > System Documentation > Production

In addition, please note that orders (including GTC or GTD orders) in affected products that exist in the current Eurex® production system on the business day prior to migration (end-of-business) will not be migrated to the new trading architecture but will be deleted.
